Long-term Care & Senior Living

One of the most highly regulated in the country, the long-term care and senior living industry faces many challenges and requires skilled, knowledgeable and experienced legal representation.

Our attorneys understand not only the federal and state regulations that govern our clients' companies, but the business environment and complex health concepts that caregivers work with every day.

Our clients in the long-term care and senior living industry range in size from large, national chains to local, privately-owned facilities. We represent medical directors and defend nurses, staff and other professionals involved in patient care and facility administration. Our experience working with a variety of clients means we're prepared to resolve issues and help individuals return to providing their patients with the care they deserve.
